EXPERIENCE 'BEAUTIFUL INDIANA' IN PHOTOS AT GARFIELD PARK ARTS CENTER

INDIANAPOLIS – (March 13, 2009) The Indiana Photographic Society presents the third annual showing of Through the Lens: Beautiful Indiana today through April 18 at the Garfield Park Arts Center. The opening reception will be held 6 to 9 p.m. today, March 13, 2009. Admission is free.

The exhibit will feature work by the society, an Indiana group that uses old and new technology to produce and promote fine art photography. The exhibit will freely interpret “Beautiful Indiana” with wonderful creativity. Expect landscapes, animals and birds, manmade structures, and whatever else catches the eye of the photographer!

Founded in 2006 by Jay Allen, the society meets weekly at the Garfield Park Arts Center. It provides opportunities for members to take part in photo excursions and educational programs, show in exhibitions, and to share new work.

“The partnership between the society and the Arts Center helps us bring a form of fine art to the general public through our photography exhibits,” said Indiana Photographic Society President Anthony Carlino. “We hope to continue the relationship with Garfield Parks Arts Center and continue to grow the society.”
